religious liberty for all mankind," is to give a reception and dinner next Saturday evening in Yorkville Casino, No. 210 East Eighty-eighth street, to Mayor-elect John Purroy Mitchel. This is to be the second annual reception and dinner of the society, of which Mr. Mitchel was an early member.

There will be a reception to the Mayor-elect and other distinguished guests, lasting from 7:30 until 8:30 o'clock, when dinner will be served. The members of the organization and their guests will have their wives and sweethearts at the affair, and dancing will follow the dinner.

Mr. Mitchel will deliver an address outlining his ideas of the qualities he desires in the men he will appoint to office in the new administration. Other speakers will be Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port; Comptroller William A. Prendergast; Marcus M. Marks, President-elect of the Borough of Manhattan; and John J. Murphy, Tenement House Commissioner.

Four prosperous looking men were sauntering through Madison Square yesterday afternoon when Detectives Calson and Murphy of Inspector Faurot's staff arrested them. The men had come from a house in West Twenty-fourth street, where they had rented the parlor floor for a real estate office.

The detectives suspected the four of having taken part in the robbery of L. C. Wharton, who arrived in New York from London on Nov. 20, and two days later presented $2,500 to "wireless wire-tappers."

Wharton told Inspector Faurot that the day after he landed he took a walk up Broadway. Near Twenty-fifth street he met a man who said he was "Mr. Burke." This man introduced Mr. Wharton to one Linton, who announced joyously that he had just won $20,000 on the Charleston races.

Next day, Wharton says, he and his two new acquaintances bet on the races. He won. Then he was persuaded to bet $2,500. Linton was to put the money down for a place. Instead he bet to win. The horse ran second.

"Burke" was so angry with Linton, Wharton said, "that he beat him severely and I had to interfere."

But on thinking it over Wharton decided the fight was a "fake" and he went to Inspector Faurot.

Burke's description tallied exactly with that of John M. Brady, who has a police record. He was traced to the Twenty-fourth street house. The detectives waited nearby yesterday, and saw him come out with men described as John F. Benton of No. 125 West Twenty-fifth street, known under many other names; Hugh Madison, alias Harry Norton, of No. 40 Grove street, Jersey City, who has cards on which are engraved "Henry Madison, Norton," and Charles Carroll, alias Carboello, alias Carpenter, alias Carp, of No. 167 West Sixteenth street. The trailing to Madison square and the arrests followed.

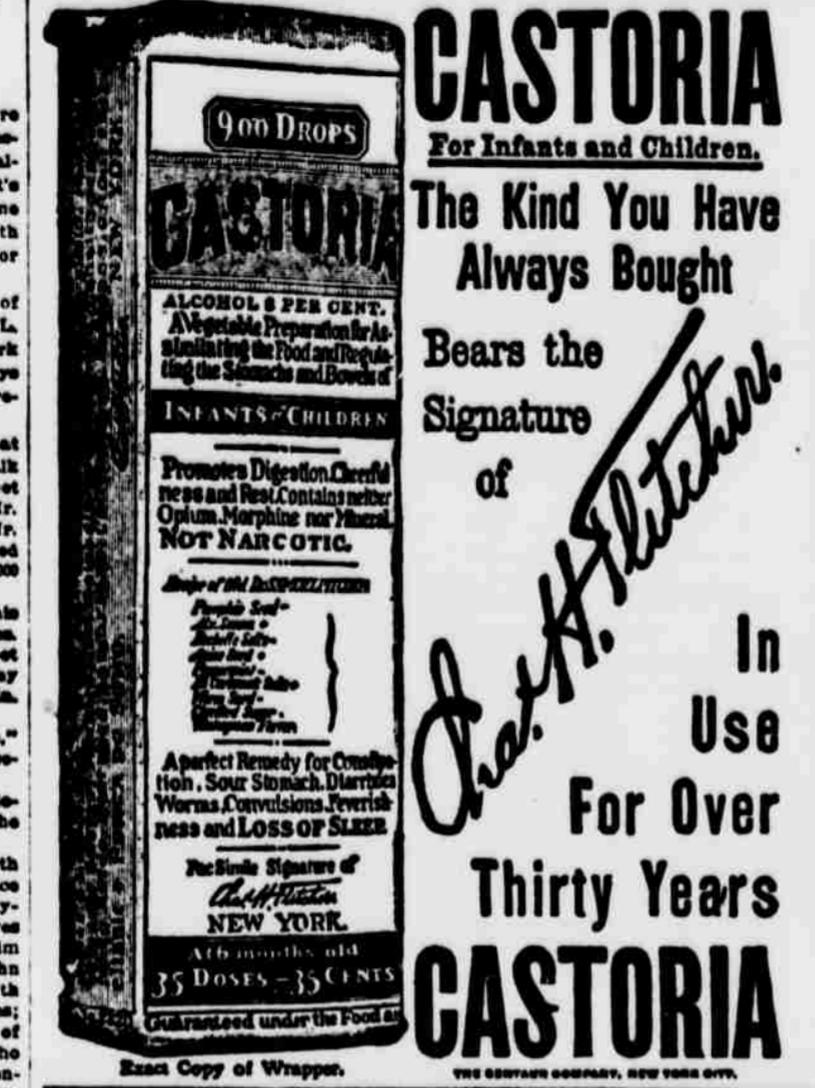

The four were locked up in the East Twenty-second street station. In Carroll's pockets were $1,500.
